

NUTRITION & DIET

We feel very strongly that a raw meat and bone diet is the best (and most natural) food source for our pets. Our puppies are introduced to raw meat and bones at four weeks and are eating it very well by five weeks old - along with mommy's milk, and a healthy blend of good food & nutrients listed below. In the interest of maximum health benefits, it is our wish that all of our puppy owners commit to this diet as well, but the choice is ultimately yours to make. *Your pups will live longer with less vet bills if you follow my diet.

Many, many people are overwhelmed with the thought of the raw diet. A book I highly recommend is called Raw & Natural Nutrition for Dogs. This is such an excellent and easy to understand book, and will help you make your own raw meals that are well balanced. (We carry this book, ask for it)

Your puppy has thrived because he/she is eating the best diet available which consists of Lifes Abundance, Orijen, & both of the Taste of the Wild Puppy food Protein sources (fish & red meat) dry. They get 95% meat (chicken, or red meat, made by Lifes Abundance & Natures Variety) canned, and raw medallions or patties, by Natures Variety. They have had NU-Vet Nutritional powder since week three/four, mixed with warm water, as well as garlic powder,(seasonally for insects) and salmon oil , vitamin E & probiotics. For breakfast, lunch & dinner- 1 cup of dry out, and separately ½ can canned meat & ½-1 scoop nu-Vet (or ½-1 tab eaten by mouth) mixed with yogurt or a pro-biotic powder or liquid, 1 /2 pump salmon oil with 400mg vitamin E tab. The puppy will eat the meat 3 x daily and then dry as needed. (Nutrients only one meal a day) I will have all of these items for sale on pick-up day as well as other recommended supplies.*See feeding chart/instruction sheet.

Leave dry out to eat whenever hungry...they have had all they want to eat since day one, and if you continue, you will likely not have problems with your dog over-eating, or gorging, or pica (eating everything)

<http://www.dogfoodadvisor.com/dog-food-reviews/brand/>

The above link will help you find out about foods ratings...a huge help when shopping for great foods for your dog!